DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

1. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

2. Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention. For example, in lines 5-7, the use of "which virtual transmission path" is not clear. In addition, lines 10-16 are not easily understood.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

3. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

4. Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being clearly anticipated by Conoscenti et al. Conoscenti et al. discloses a method that employs both a virtual path identifier (VPI) and a virtual channel identifier (VCI) in the administration of an ATM network. The network is composed in part by broadcast sources, subscriber terminals, as well as the physical ATM network that supports the communication between them (See Figure 1). Conoscenti et al. employs the VPI to identify the broadcast source. The VCI identifies channels that are distributed by the broadcast source. In this manner, the VPI represents a group of subscribers assigned to a particular broadcast source. Similarly, the VCI forms a subgroup that represents subscribers who are provided access to the same channel by a specific broadcast source (See Column 2, lines 57 to 65).

Response to Arguments

5. Applicant's arguments filed November 4 2003 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. In response to applicant's argument that the VPI does not represent a group of destination identifiers, the VPI identifies the provider of a program or service. Subscribers that employ the same provider constitute a group. Subscribers that employ a different provider constitute a different group. Therefore, a change in VPI is a change in group.

In response to applicant's argument that the VCI does not represent a subgroup of destination identifiers, the instance in which two subscribers access the same broadcast service, identified by the VCI, is an instance in which these two subscribers form a subgroup (See Column 3, lines 32-37).
